

Does your dog need a date?

If hooking Bruno up with a hot date doesn't tickle your fancy you could always enter him into a modeling agency.

As bizarre as it sounds there are websites out there for you to play cupid to your pet with online dating sites and there are agencies for animal acting and modeling for films commercials and print advertising.

Animal actors in America are on the rise.

Animal competitions, adoption, clothing ranges and more for your pets are now the next big thing!

Have you ever wondered why we treat our pets like babies and relate their behavior to our own?

Is there some sort of psychology behind it all?

Nowadays especially with the influence of the internet, people are finding more ways to try and transform their animals into humans.

You could say this is simply a way for animal lovers to outwardly express their internal love for their pets but there is more behind it than that.

Dogs

People talk to babies in the same way they talk to their dogs with high-pitched voices and repetitive use of words.

This raises the question of whether we're treating our babies like dogs or our dogs like babies.

Aishlinn who breeds dogs said, "Timmy our family dog and is defiantly the baby of the family and everybody loves to fuss over him. There are even sometimes fights over him."

We know our dogs cannot understand us however we proceed in making ourselves look silly anyhow.

"I always talk to my dog. Who doesn't?" said Aishlinn.

In an experiment held in Hungary in 2001 by Pongracz, Miklosi and Csanyi discover that dogs obey 53% of the time but only when the context was right.

This is quite a high percentage which leaves room for the prospect of canine understanding however it may be more likely that it's simply the dog's familiarity to certain body gestures or tone of voice.

Aishlinn said, "I prefer dogs as they do what you tell them to but cats take the message and get back to you."

A recent study found out that couples come to resemble each other over time. Dogs were found to also resemble their owners but only if they're purebreds.

Cats

Have you ever found yourself saying it's me or the cat?

Cat lovers: If your cat is allergic to your husband I wouldn't advise you to get the divorce papers just yet.

A recent Swiss study tested 212 couples with cats, compared how their pet affected their mood in comparison to how their partner did.

The results proved that cats could ease negative moods yet were unlikely to promote positive moods.

People's positive moods were also associated with their partners.

Therefore your little furry friend may not have you doing back-flips but they'll certainly take the edge off a bad day.

You know you love your cat but is this mutual?

Analysis of the cat's behavior suggested they were indeed emotionally attached.

While the cats were with their owners they appeared more relaxed and were more likely to explore their environment so you can all sit back and relax in the knowing that you are loved.

Nicole who adopted a cat who was once abused said,

"My cat doesn't really like me. She was abused before we got her so it's been hard for her to bond with new people."

Many people who don't own pets just think that animals are just a ball of fluff and they don't see why people get so attached to them, though us pet lovers know that our love for our pets is unconditional and it cannot be helped if we choose them over partners.
